MANAGING YOUR OWN FINANCES

Individual tutoring or small group learning

Everyone needs to have financial skills to make good decisions about money. It is about being independent in managing your money, making sure you can pay all your essential bills and have some left over for saving and spending – on you.

Learning good money management skills does take time.

Catalyst offers tutoring sessions. These are generally held over 12 weeks – but you can negotiate more time if you need it.

Use your NDIS capacity building
funds to learn how to manage your money

By the end of the Managing your own Finances program you will have:

- Identified the difference between what you need to buy and what you want
- Identified your 'money habits' (good and not so good)
- Developed and used your own personal budget
- Experienced paying your own bills
- Put a savings plan in place
- Learned how to use banks and other financial institutions
- Learned how to use assistive technology to manage your money

If you have capacity building funds in your NDIS plan talk to Catalyst about individual tutoring around managing your own finances. You could also choose to join a small group who all want to learn the same skills.

Relevant funding in your NDIS plan is listed under individual social skills development.
